Wallaroo is a large regional town with a strong maritime sector including a commercial shipping wharf and grain terminal, a professional fishing fleet, a recreational marina, and a large housing estate with waterfront boat access. A full range of services and supplies is available, with the unfortunate exception of a fuel berth – fuel is supplied by a tanker truck, and the minimum quantity is far in excess of what a typical cruising yacht can take.

Berths are available for rental in the marina (known as the Copper Cove Marina) and the following link can be used for further information coppercovemarina.com.au

Anchoring is possible off the beach north of the marina entrance channel, and a dinghy landing can be made either on the beach, or at the boat launching ramp just inside this entrance.
